A shooting at a downtown nightclub has sent a man to hospital and left a woman with shrapnel wounds to her face, according to Toronto Police.

Officers were called to Tonic, located at 117 Peter Street, around 2:47am Saturday.

When they got there, they found a 20-year-old man with gunshot wounds in his left arm and thigh. He was rushed to hospital to be treated for non-life-threatening injuries.

Meanwhile, a 21-year-old woman was treated by emergency crews on scene. Police say her injury was caused by flying shrapnel that was a direct result of the shooting.

Officers are looking for suspects.
